

This document is a video report about/ that addresses access to healthcare in the USA during the covid pandemic. It was published in January 2021 by Aljazeera.

Many Americans lost their jobs and therefore their employer-funded health insurance because of covid. Before the pandemic, 28 million Americans were uninsured, but in early 2021 this number reached 33 to 38 million people nationwide.

To answer this situation, Joe Biden signed an executive order to widen Americans' access to government-funded healthcare. Unfortunately, many families are too poor to buy this new type of health policy, but they are also too rich to benefit from Medicaid.

Many politicians and people believe that the healthcare system should be reformed and that everyone should have access to basic care for free.
